Award-Winning Novelist Louise Gaylord to Autograph Copies of Page-Turner, Anacacho, an Allie Armington Mystery

A recipient of the National 2003 Benjamin Franklin Mystery/Suspense Award, Gaylord joins the ranks of literary notables such as Ray Bradbury, Carol Higgins Clark, Gregg Hurwitz, Thomas Perry and Denise Hamilton at The Mystery Bookstore's 3rd Anniversary Celebration of their Westwood, California Location

Los Angeles, CA (October 1, 2003) –With feisty, sometimes irrepressible Allie Armington as the heroine of her must-read book, Louise Gaylord's award-winning mystery novel Anacacho has the potential to excite mystery fans throughout the United States. At 3 PM on October 25, 2003, Los Angeles suspense and mystery-novel buffs will have a chance to meet and greet this rising star when she signs her book at the big event produced by The Mystery Bookstore, 1036-C Broxton Avenue, Los Angeles (in Westwood Village.) Currently, Gaylord is writing her second novel in the Allie Armington series, Mayhem in Manhattan, set in New York. According to Leonard Tourney, author of Frobisher's Savage, this honor is more than fitting for first-time novelist, Gaylord, who has already produced “a suspense novel with enough twists and turns in its plot to satisfy the most demanding mystery reader.”

Anacacho, a well-crafted and fast-paced mystery, takes place in contemporary Texas. Starting with a bang, Allie Armington reluctantly meets with her used-to-be best college friend (who incidentally stole and married the love of Allie's life), and from this reunion the story evolves to a murder and conspiracy involving cattle, oil and drugs. Anacacho is sure to please fans of suspenseful, fast-paced mysteries as Allie Armington finds herself very much in danger, not only for losing her reputation as a fearless and spirited attorney, but her life as well. This story immediately engages readers, making it a page-turner and nail-biter.

More Praise for Anacacho:

Anacacho “moves at a feverish pace!”

—Santa Barbara News Press

“Anacacho pulls us, along with Assistant District Attorney Allie Armington, from the Grand Jury room in Houston to South Texas, big ranches with airstrips, cocaine, kidnapping and murder. Gaylord mixes the proper amount of suspense, love and excitement. A TERRIFIC NOVEL!”

—V.T. Abercrombie, poet, author, publisher

Louise Gaylord has penned over 30 short stories, several one act plays and one full length play, “The Season,” that was produced by several theaters in the Southwest. She divides her time between Houston, Texas, Montecito, California and the Adirondacks. She is available for interviews. Check out her online media room at www.Anacacho.com. Anacacho is published by Little Moose Press, Beverly Hills, California.
